

A RESPONSE TO: "Changeable Weather", 6th June 2024

Changeable Weather

Reading these first few sentences while seeing the image below was very funny.

[Others must be taken seriously, they are very dangerous] -- others

I love to imagine you putting on the waterproofs backwards, fumbling around, maybe dropping them, picking them up, and putting them on again only to find them on backwards again! All the while getting a bit soaked.

I like the style of the specificity made aside aside the most. Heehee :)

Bruce's

[I recall your forgetting] -- mint
Orkney has cheese? I'd have never guessed! Never seen before.

[I do hope you picked a less cluttered packet of the biscuits] -- biscuits

[I love smoked cheese! Was excited until I continued reading] -- cheese

[There is a lot of shortbread, made for me!] -- shortbread (2)

I believe Scotland's specificity foods in general stick to beige, both baked goods (shortbread & oat cakes) and cheese (though often not dry) and beer (which sometimes is sweet). When I think Scottish food, I occasionally (like now) think of strawberries, potentially now more so because I had for breakfast.

[I hope Bruce's has black cartridges as I am running low] -- ink

[I'm unsure what made you think I'd want to look at a bath fitter, to my heart's content specifically, but I suppose I am glad of the option to] -- fitter

Walking Around

[unfortunately looks like plastic flowers / branches, but I do like the you in the photo] -- flowers

I would agree. I love side alleys and shops down them.

The jeep reminds me of my uncle's car.

[love the stone work around here] -- driveway

[so pretty!] -- My (2)

[Indeed I like the work & effort put into the sign. I knew nothing of its illegality] -- poster

Scottish Tart Board

[this reminds me of map men] -- sign

Buildings

I must say, "Shearer" is the perfect name for anyone working close to gardening in some way. Also cheap.

[I would assume provisions include candles, torches, batteries, and the like] -- shop

I can picture this perfectly! I love that kind of thing.

Buildings do interest me.

[fascinating that you consider the step-y roof to be very British as I recall being told that style was Dutch when learning New York City history in 2nd or 3rd grade and have ever since had my eyes always watching that] -- roof

[I love the hand made street sign, so much personality!] -- warren's

[omg I love tiles and I have photos of my own of the house numbers which may or may not have made it onto my own posts] -- tiles

[I love the reflection of those glass tiles / blocks on the building!] -- blue

Orkney

[I love the stereotypical bird photos] -- bird

[these clouds are so cool!!!!] -- clouds (2)

[I love the word crisp :] -- shadows

Shale pavements are scary! When wet, super slippery (in my experience). A strange pick for wet alas.

[this photo is so cool because of the hole, of course, but also because I see flecks of red (flowers peeked through the red-bordered window] -- ruh

Walls

I thought this an incredibly strange opening until I saw the first photo. Hahaha! :)

Oh actually, I got really confused and changed "Robert Frost" to "the Grinch"....

[I do love plants growing out of walls, particularly stone and brick] -- leaf

Long moss!!!! This beats all others] -- moss

[such a cool photo, sort of stock photo, but cool] -- crack

Red Flower

I love it. I love that it has its own section.

[I like this one more] -- offcentre

My Own Thoughts

My only question is, why was it significant that you took a photo of the fish? My first thought was that it was related to me (my contact name in your phone).

My second thought, well, I didn't really have one. I thought it would be cleared up later in the post. I was wrong. Alas!

Much love!

!Sabella! ♡
